The Katrina Aftermath
69th Scientific Sessions American Diabetes Association
June 2009

Here we go again with the summary of the 69th Scientific Sessions of the American Diabetes Association. The bosses say that this summary is far too long so I will try to shorten it. I do have ulterior motives because I also find it pretty trying at times. The meetings were in New Orleans this year. I was very interested to see how it looked after Katrina and I have to say that the areas in which I was looked very much like the old days. I realize that there has been tremendous devastation for the city but the convention area, the French Quarters and the other downtown areas looked remarkably good. For those of you who insist on weather, it was hot and sticky much of the time. We did manage to hit a couple of those wonderful New Orleans downpours that make me realize what a desert we really live in. There was no time for baseball this year (What? This must be an imposter doing the summary!) But I can highly recommend Jacques-Imo's for wonderful Cajun eating. It was decorated in early 1970s hippie and brought back many fond memories.
